Bennett v. Jeffreys, 20 NY2d 543 (1976): Non-parent may obtain custody only if extraordinary circumstances exist, followed by an analysis indicating it would be in the child’s best interests of child(ren) for the non-parent to obtain custody. Examples of extraordinary circumstance - parental unfitness, abandonment, child living for extended period of time with non-parent.

Suarez v. Williams, 26 NY3d 440 (2015): Pursuant to DRL 72(2), extraordinary circumstances exist when the child has lived with the grandparents for an extended period of time, even if the child has had some contact with the parents.

Guinta v. Doxtator, 20 AD3d 47 (4th Dept 2005): Court may not revisit the issue of extraordinary circumstances once extraordinary circumstances have been established.
